Since our first gathering in 2004, the Adderley Positive Research Incubator has enabled 120+ researchers in the field of Positive Organizational Scholarship to share research ideas while still in development. This safe space encourages the development of high-quality research and allows for positive, constructive feedback on projects still in progress.

SESSION 1
May 5, 2004
Inaugural session dubbed a “half-baked brown bag” features Center for Positive Organizations co-founder Robert E. Quinn and his perceptual model of negative and positive organizing.

SESSION 24
March 27, 2007
Scott Sonenshein (PhD ’07) shares preliminary thoughts on his doctoral research: identity ambiguity during change. Scott holds a named professorship at Rice University and will publish his first book, Stretch, in February 2017.

SESSION 104
September 25, 2012
Amy Wrzesniewski (PhD ’99) shares “Meaning and Motivation Over Time.” Amy would go on to co-author the Job Crafting Exercise (with Justin Berg and Jane Dutton) and is a professor at Yale University.

SESSION 154
November 10, 2015
The Center for Positive Organizations’ first fully-supported postdoctoral fellow, Julia Lee, presents “Lemons to Lemonade: Making the Worst Part of the Workday Useful.”

SESSION 11
July 18, 2005
CPO co-founder Jane Dutton and then-student Adam Grant (PhD ’06) share “Being a Contribution.” Adam is now a Wharton professor and New York Times bestselling author of Give and Take and Originals.

SESSION 54
December 16, 2008

SESSION 125
December 11, 2013
Our global impact is strengthened by Johan Schoeman’s visit from the Nelson Mandela Metropolitan University in South Africa. Johan, our 125th incubator presenter, helped establish the POS Centre for Africa.

SESSION 154
November 10, 2015
We honor the generous support of Terence E. Adderley with the naming of the Adderley Positive Research Incubator. To come full-circle, Robert E. Quinn talks about creating organizations of higher purpose.